

the pretensions of the prominent individuals who have been named for this high trust. It will earnestly advocate, not by constitutional amendment, but in practice, the limitation of the tenure of the Presidential office to one term, not only in justice to the many distinguished men belonging to the Republican party, but as more consonant to the genius of our institutions, and more conducive to a faithful and independent administration of the Government. It will be in favor of a National Convention, organized in the mode, and to assemble at a period sufficiently remote, to take the question of a Presidential nomination, out of the hands of politicians, and place it where it properly belongs, in the hands of the people.

As heretofore, a portion of the paper will be devoted to choice literary selections and the current news of the week. Particular attention will be paid to the Army and Navy intelligence. During the session of Congress, a comprehensive summary of its proceedings will be given. In short, no pains will be spared to furnish an instructive and interesting newspaper.

JOHN HEART.
Washington City, D.C. March 18, 1843.

We tell our Democratic friends every where to arouse themselves for the fight. Put down your intestine feuds. Away with this quarrel between the two houses of the Montagues and Capulets. Put Van Burenism and Calhounism on the shelf, and pipe the whole crew to quarters to save the ship.—[Richmond Enquirer.]

That's the word! We say pipe all hands for the local elections. If we must differ, let it be on points where there is a real difference. Like a quarrel between man and wife, when it is over, all things will go on harmoniously. Let us, then, arm for the fight which is at hand, and afterwards quarrel again, and join ranks a second time to defeat the common enemy. All hands on deck.—[Alabama Tribune.]

The Lady and the Lawyer.—A lawyer not over young or handsome, in examining a young lady a witness in court, made many attempts to confuse her, and thus render her testimony contradictory and unavailing. She, however, remained calm and proof against all frivolous questions put to her. At last the lawyer determined to perplex her, said, "Miss, upon my word, you are very pretty!" The young lady very promptly replied, "I would return the compliment, sir, if I were not on oath." As may be supposed, the lawyer questioned her no more.

COMETS.—Lieut. Maury says, that the comet of terrible magnitude which appeared in 1546 created great consternation.—The Turks were then waging a bloody and successful war upon the Christians. Its tail, pointing to the east, was sixty degrees long, and bent like a sabre. It filled Christendom with awe, and the Pope regarding it as a signal of Divine wrath and vengeance, ordered a day of humiliation and prayer, and offered one year's indulgence to all who, at the tolling of noon-day bell, should repeat three paternosters and as many Ave Marias. In this observance originated, it is said, the custom, still prevalent in Catholic countries of ringing the bells at noon.

Infalible Cure for a Foundered Horse.—If your horse founders over night, in the morning take a pint of hog's lard, put in a vessel and make it boiling hot, clean his hoofs well, set his foot in the lard.—Heat it for each foot, biling hot; take a spoon and put the fat over the hoof as near the hair as possible, and he will be fit for use in three hours if it is done early in the morning. It is better to remove the horse's shoes, but I have made several cures without. I have tried this on many horses during a period of fifty years, and have never known it to fail.—[Louisville Jour.]

VALUABLE REMEDIES.
Headache.—Bothe the forehead and temples with a mixture of hartshorn and strong vinegar, equal parts, and snuff a little of it up the nose. Sick headache must be cured by an emetic, as it proceeds from a full stomach.
Sore Mouth.—Mix together honey and white wax, equal parts, and with a linen rag tied to the end of a skewer, rub the mouth three or four times a day.
Sore Throat.—Take twenty drops of spirits of turpentine on loaf sugar every night, till cured. Black currant jelly hastens the cure.

GARDEN VEGETABLES.
EARLY CUCUMBERS.—The following has been found by the writer, an easy and successful way to raise them. Place small pieces of dead turf, as large as ones hand, just below the soil in a hot bed, and plant the cucumber seeds upon them.—When the stems are two or three inches long, the pieces of turf are removed, plants roots and all, to rich garden soil, and they will advance rapidly in growth and produce fruit two or three weeks earlier than those planted in open ground. Suitable soil is easily obtained where grass has been inverted the previous summer or autumn. The young plants should be set out as soon as they will probably escape frost.

EARLY TOMATOES.—Where there is no hot bed, these have been successfully started in pots kept in a warm room, and the fruit ripened a week or two in advance of those otherwise treated.
While the fruit is yet green, I have much accelerated the ripening, by removing the larger leaves from dense bunches of fruit, and placing white boards behind them, so as to reflect the sun's rays strong upon them. They soon became red, while the rest remained unchanged in color. Would not planting them, as well as any other of the smaller garden fruits, against a white washed fence or wall, prove of great advantage? It is estimated in England, that a good wall for fruit is equal to an advance of six degrees towards the equator; why then is this powerful means of producing early fruit, so generally overlooked in this country?

EARLY POTATOES.—It is well known that the eye end of a potato will yield a crop earlier by some days, than the root end. This appears to be owing simply to the earlier growth of the sprouts from the eye end. Carelessness will be greatly increased by placing the seed potatoes in a box of moist sand, early in spring, in a warm place in the house; and then planting them when the shoots are about two inches long, taking care not to break them off.

LIME.—Its tendency to diminish the growth of leaves and stem, and increase that of seed and fruit, is well known. It had been applied two years before to the strawberry bed, at the rate of about half a bushel to a square rod. A similar effect was observed on tomatoes, when the mature they received, which was well rated had a small quantity of lime thoroughly mixed with it. The growth of their stems was moderate, and the product in fruit, very abundant. Others, manured without lime, grew abundantly in stem, and the product of fruit not quite so great. Slacked lime was used. The difference might have been owing to other causes; at any rate, more experiments are needed.

EARLY LETTUCE.—This was obtained at least three weeks earlier than other lettuce sown in the hot bed, by taking up plants, sown the previous autumn in open ground, and transplanting them into the hot bed as soon as it was made. They were urged forward in growth rapidly, by the new heat they received, and formed heads four or five inches in diameter, while the other lettuce was hardly an inch high.
